State Urging Safer Hunting

Hunting safety is the byword this year in Maine. This state is going all out in a campaign to cut shootings afield to the very minimum and if constant hammering away at a subject means anything, we should see fewer fatalities than last year.

These are a few of the things the State is doing in its Safety campaign:

Governor Frederick G. Payne has issued the following statement:

"To give emphasis to the need for careful hunting, I am asking that sportsmen set aside Oct. 1-6 as Safe Hunting Week. During that week, I ask for the full cooperation of press and radio in persistently spreading those words of caution with which we are all so familiar but which still bear constant repetition until their full meaning is drilled into our consciousness.

"These are the cardinal rules of hunting safety:

"Treat every gun as a loaded gun.

"Be absolutely certain of your target.

"Do not point the muzzle at anything you do not want to shoot; nor allow it to stray in the direction of another hunter.

"Remember that rifle slugs may ricochet. Do not shoot at water or any hard, smooth surface.

"Unload your gun before you get into your car or before you enter your camp or home. Then check it twice to be sure.

"Think, think, think. Be SURE that it's game. It could be a human being and end tragically.

"Hunt safely and allow others to do the same."

In addition to the Governor's statement, Warden Hunting Accident Inspector Maynard Marsh, Gorham, and public relations man, Bob Elliott, Augusta, are appearing on all Maine radio stations; on sending tape recordings of their voices. Their talks over the air are on hunting safety. The Governor's statement, as given above, also has been cut into tape recording and is being used by several stations. Through the cooperation of a Portland station, a wire is being sent to Arthur Godfrey, asking that he comment on Maine's Safe-Hunting program.

Newspapers are being material similar to this release and also short fillers on safer hunting. Fillers that can be used as station breaks also are going out to radio in Maine.

The Fish and Game Department is again this year posting large signs on trees, camps and other places in the woods where hunters will see them. The Sporting Arms and Ammunition Institute, which cooperates in the printing of these posters, has been asked to send mats to Maine for use in our papers during the open season.

The State is having dies made to stamp all mail going out of the State House post office with slogans suggesting hunting safety.

Wardens, some 125 of them, have been asked to speak in schools in Maine and to stress hunting safety, use of firearms, etc.

Sportsmen are being urged to cooperate in every possible way and several have appeared on radio programs. Others plan special meet-

Mount Washington Trip

Saturday, October 6, 24 students and three teachers from Gould Academy climbed the ever-impressive Mount Washington. The students, girls who are taking hiking, and two boys, Edward Hastings and Harley Merrill, who had climbed this mountain previously, accompanied by Mr and Mrs Richardson and Miss Doryce Arndt, girls' gym teacher, started early Saturday morning despite the forecasts of rain and dismal weather. For most of the girls this was their first attempt at real mountain climbing. The group traveled by but to the Glen House at the foot of the mountain and soon started on their upward climb. Each hiker carried his or her own food and clothing. The trail to the recently burned half-way house was clearly marked and not too difficult to ascend. The group continued upward and very shortly the fog could be seen falling and blowing around almost like snow. It grew much colder and very very damp. The unaided hikers stopped at the foot of the Ravine to eat lunch and catch a second breath. The trail up Tackerman's Ravine was marked with cairns and although it was impossible to see very far ahead, the group reached the top about noon time thoroughly chilled by fog and mist and being cold and which blew against them all the way from the half-way house.

The hotel was closed as the dripping hikers went to a hut where a warm fire was going and spent an enjoyable hour, talking with other hikers and night-owls. The more ambitious hikers ventured out to see television at the weather observatory. After their rest and refreshment the party was on the downward march and decided to return by the same trail. The group reached the foot of the mountain in about two hours. The group about one hour later, despite stiff joints and aching feet, the Gould hikers enjoyed every moment of the trip.

Football

South Paris won their 11th straight game by defeating Gould 15-0 last Saturday. The game was played during a constant drizzle which transformed the field into a quagmire before the final whistle was blown.

The Gould team journeyed to Lyndon, Vermont, this Saturday.

Bureaucracy and the Indian

At a time when so many Americans are being shocked by visions of a Federal welfare state which promises to remove the handicapped of life and set up a guaranteed standard of good health, adequate education, complete welfare and security for all it would be surprising to find a good deal of talk about the American Indian, who have lived for centuries in such a welfare state.

For 100 years the Federal government has been the largest and most powerful of the Indian welfare states. It has been the largest and most powerful of the Indian welfare states. It has been the largest and most powerful of the Indian welfare states.

Two other measures completed the congressional bill and were sent to the White House. One was the military and naval construction program carrying on about $100,000,000 for the fiscal year 1952. The other measure was the Air Force bill, which would increase the Air Force from three major commands to four and add a fourth to the chief of staff of the Air Force.

"HOW TO WIN FRIENDS and INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

Difficult To Change Acquired Personality

KATHERINE HAYS, Cambridge, Mass., began worrying at the age of seven, and with reason. Her parents separated and she went to live with an aunt. Shortly after her parents' separation, she was told by her mother that one day she would be called into court to tell a judge which parent she wanted to live with. This troubled her young mind no end, for she loved both parents and she had never admitted even to herself which parent she preferred.

So she tossed about in her sleep at night wondering how she would settle this weighty matter. Young as she was she knew it would affect her entire future. Both parents would want her, and she was bewildered about the decision she had to make. It would be better, she thought, if neither of them wanted her. That gave her an idea. She would be so naughty and so disagreeable that no one would really want her. She went to work on this idea and was as successful as she had hoped to be.

By and by, she was dubbed a problem child and was packed off to boarding school where she became very unpopular with the other pupils. More than that, every teacher there looked at her askance and seemed glad when rid of her. Of course, she was a very unhappy little girl.

But this attitude of hers continued until she was 15 years old. Then her father died and her conscience began to trouble her. She wanted her mother's love, but her mother didn't seem to understand her. And she yearned for friends.

Shortly after her father's death, she learned that the divorce had been granted her parents soon after their separation. Then she realized that all her worry over the important decision had been for nothing. She had not been called into court. She realized, too, that both parents had loved her and wanted to save her from all unhappiness.

Now she set about to undo what she had done, to gain her mother's confidence, and to make friends among her classmates. She watched the other children and attempted to emulate the happy ones. She found that little acts of friendship worked. But it was a hard pull and she says that even now, after 20 years, she still finds the hard struggle to undo what became so ingrained in her nature.

THIS WEEK IN Washington

LAST MINUTE conference committee took at the coming tax law, the new postal rate increase bill, the government employee pay raise, committee consideration of the center of Senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin, further committee probes into use of their facilities before the HRC by the two national party chairmen—Gay Gabrielson of the Republican national committee and William Boyle, Jr., of the Democratic national committee were highlights of the week in Washington.

Another important measure scheduled for settlement before adjournment and on the "must" list, was the foreign-aid bill and the task of reconciling the differences between the house and senate version. In an amazing consensus, subcommittees of the senate banking and currency committee voted to modify the so-called Copeland clause in the national production act. Under the present law, the Copeland provision permits prices on commodities to include all incurred costs of production incurred between start of Korean war and last July 20. The subcommittee went even farther than the amendment asked by the administration which would have restricted the Copeland provisions to future price ceilings.

DIFFICULT FEEDING PROBLEM

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare.

It has long been rumored in Washington, which is the rumor center of the nation, that Secretary of State Dean Acheson is willing to retire to private life but that he would not do so while under attack.

If that theory is correct, the Secretary would find it easy to step down now. His work at the Japanese peace treaty meeting has brought him praise from all quarters, including such previously severe critics as Senators Knowland and Taft. So far as public esteem is concerned, this was undoubtedly the high point of his public career.

There is more to it, however, than just the Secretary's conduct as chairman of one brief conference. A rather subtle change has been taking place for a long time in American policies. Holmes Alexander expresses it in these words: "Acheson has gone over to a policy of America first. Or to give the matter another pitch, he has begun to assert American leadership, often to the annoyance of our allies and associates. A good enough example took place two months ago in Madrid. For years the state department had hesitated to risk laborite Britain and near-Communist France by casting an official eye toward Franco. But the need of Spanish bases at last outweighed the thought of offending our poor relations in Western Europe, and the deal was opened. . . . Likewise, at Washington and Ottawa, Acheson has been calling the tune."

It also means that there will be much less coddling of the weak sisters in the ranks of nations which are supposed to form a solid line against the further spread of Communism.

The big point is that America is now politically but forcefully demanding that Europe do more, much more, to build bulwarks against the onrush of world Communism. To recently, she had done woefully little, considering the enormity and immediacy of the problem. The Korean War is officially a United Nations effort, but aside from the United States the UN members have sent only token forces. It is no secret that General Eisenhower has been all the verbal support on earth in his effort to build a European army at an unprecedented speed—but he hasn't been given much in the way of donations. And it's divisions that are when you deal with the Soviet.

THE AMERICAN WAY
National Bible Week

George Peck

EDITOR'S NOTE: George Peck is Chairman of the Board of National Labor-Management Foundation and Executive Editor of its official publication, PARTNERS. Eleventh National Bible Week is to be observed October 15-21, sponsored by the Laymen's National Committee, a non-profit organization comprising men and women of all religious faiths, recruited from all walks of life.

At this time when war clouds loom, when corruption is running rampant throughout America, more than ever before the people of this nation need the comfort, help and wisdom that can be theirs by daily reading of the WORLD'S GREATEST BOOK - THE HOLY BIBLE.

The Laymen's National Committee recommends especially a reading and re-reading of the 23rd Psalm. Here is a passage of Scripture that fairly sings with its rhythmic flow of words, and the reading of which probably has comforted and helped more people than anything that has ever been written.

David, the shepherd author of this beautiful passage, had known loneliness and travail, and in this 23rd Psalm he recounts how he had found the diagnosis of and the cure for his troubles, as he says in its first verse:

"The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

That he had experienced care and anxiety, he explains by saying further:

"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."

That he could have been sorely tried and he had found succor, he tells:

"He restoreth my soul; He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake."

He goes on to state how he had been able to rid himself of fears that had made his life unbearable:

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and the staff they comfort me."

David had enemies, and he recounts how God had enabled him to overcome and to subdue them:

"Thou prepared a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; Thou hast subdued my head with oil; my cup runneth over."

And in the final verse of this magnificent chapter the Psalmist tells us that he had a problem that had been a hindrance to his peace:

"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever."

The 23rd Psalm is but of the many beautiful passages to be found in the GRANGE edition of the National Bible Week which is a good time for those who have forgotten this fact to take the scroll that lies off to one side and read it again.

For those who have never known the comfort and joy that stems from daily Bible reading it will be an auspicious time to get acquainted with the Guide Book of the Grange. To the younger of these new readers the Laymen's Committee suggests that they turn first to the chapters Chapter 12, the first verses of which reads:

"Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

Never to our history has the nation needed so greatly the moral elements which can be derived from the Bible. It is hoped that during Eleventh National Bible Week October 15-21, millions of Americans will discover or rediscover the wonderful GREATEST BOOK.

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Thursday, October 11

"This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you." (John 15:12). Read 1 Corinthians 13.

A Missionary was presented with a beautiful leopard skin to carry home to America. After the missionary had expressed wonder and delight over the beauty of the present, the giver said, "It is neither black nor entirely white. It is prettier so!" The blending of dark and light shades is what made the skin so beautiful.

I like to think of the human race in these terms. If we could have a blending of the fine relationships of all peoples, black, white, yellow, and brown, it would check international tension and make this world a better place in which to live.

It is a fact that the word brotherhood is often given but lip service. Race, creeds, and social strata are huge gaps among peoples. Since we so often do not know one another, how much less can we love one another!

We need to try to understand other peoples in every opportunity that we have and show love to them, even as Christ has loved us. This was Christ's command at the Last Supper.

Prayer
Make us channels of blessing today, dear Lord. Help us to act always in obedience to Thy commandment that we love one another. Use us to help in giving meaning to the words, love and brotherhood. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Thought for the Day

Golden Text: "The Lord is my strength and song, and is become my salvation. . . I shall not die, but live, and declare the works of the Lord." (Psalms 118:14, 17).

Nothing, says Goethe, is so terrible as activity without insight. Look before you leap is a maxim for the world.

Yes, a deer's tail is white—and so is a man's handkerchief. Wait for the shoulder shot and if it's a man's shoulder, don't shoot.

NOTICE TO MOTORISTS

Shortage of metal makes it necessary to re-issue registration plates that have been returned to the Secretary of State. We are asking the cooperation of motorists to turn in all 1950 Maine plates not being used to the Motor Vehicle Division, Augusta. Postage will be reimbursed. This will aid us in our registration work and make it possible to continue our program. The plates are the property of the state and your assistance in returning them, if unrenewed for 1951, will be greatly appreciated.

Blessings Unlimited

HOW often we hear someone say, "I can't afford it," or "I can't afford the time" to do this or that. The carnal mind insists that mortals are always in need of something - money,
health, happiness, or intelligence.

Another comment frequently heard is, "One can't have everything." The general concept of human life is that existence is incomplete; yet the Bible says (Genesis 1:31), "God saw every thing
that He had made, and behold, it was very good."

Many Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, clarifies this statement on page 518 of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," where she says, "The divine Principle, or Spirit, comprehends and expresses all, and all must therefore be as perfect
as the divine Principle is perfect."

She adds on the next page: "Deity was satisfied with His work. How could He be otherwise, since the spiritual creation was the outgrowth, the emanation, of His infinite self-containment and immortal wisdom?"

Because there is only one perfect creation existing within God's infinite self-containment,
there can be no room for inhar-
mony or deficiency of any kind.
Should symptoms of lack appear in our daily life, they indicate that we are suffering from the belief that our being is separate from God, good. Such belief is false, because God, Mind, is everywhere, filling all there is of space,
and man is the perfect idea emanating from that Mind. As we live in the consciousness of man's unity with his Maker, abundant joy and peace fill our experience.

Most small children believe in giants and fairies; but as the child develops and grows in understanding he finds that what seemed so real to his imagination
was not real at all. So our difficulties, whatever form they take, evaporate as we grow in spiritual understanding and gain more knowledge of the kingdom of heaven, the reign of harmonious being.

Merely reading the Bible will not alone suffice, however. We must understand what we read;
and practice and proof of what we understand are essential. Christ Jesus was the most practical as well as the most spiritual. Individual who ever lived. He healed sickness, sin, and want. . . .

How often we separate ourselves from happiness because of our ignorance and distrust of the Father's loving care for all His family! In the Bible there is the promise that if we will bring all the tilth into the storehouse, that is, turn away from all material evidence and trust wholly in God's beneficence, the Lord of hosts will "open up the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it" (Malachi 3:10).

God is limitless; therefore the supply of good is unlimited. We need never envy another, because every individual child of God has access to all good. God's love and blessings are not limited to a select few, but are now and always available to each one. Our greatest need is for wisdom and understanding to see through the false beliefs of mortal mind and discern the power and goodness
of God's law.

As we express more generously,
love, and kindness in our daily life we find them reflected to us
in ever greater measure in return.
Let us, then, abandon the impoverished thoughts of ingratitude, selfishness, and discontent
and supplant them with gratitude,
unselfish love, joy, and happiness,
and so claim our birthright of abundant good. - The Christian Science Monitor.

GRASS ROOTS OPINION
Waders, Main. Pioneer Journal.
-Future increases in living costs will be due altogether to the increased taxes levied by Congress.
The way to get living costs and taxes down is for Congress to insist that public spending hereafter be at levels that our economy can afford. Those responsible may talk till they're black in the face but the fact remains that the last two Congressmen have been the most wasteful and extravagant in the history of the Republic and it is reflected in the steady decline in the dollar's buying power.

SPEND, SPEND, SPEND!

Raymond Moley devoted one of his recent Newsweek columns to Senator Paul Douglas's valiant and almost totally unsuccessful effort to bring a little of the wack out of the Federal budget. In conclusion he wrote: "It will take more than name calling, phony statistics, and wiscracks by the President to dissipate the feeling over this country that since people are being forced by higher taxes to practice self-denial, the government should set the example. All through the country there are too many glaring examples of Federal extravagance to escape notice. The country is a rich one, but it cannot stand military expenses of the size that will be essential, unless there is economy in nonmilitary spending. Taxes will not suffice, and inflation
must be the deadly harvest."

Every proposal to economize has been steamrollered to death in Congress. That is true of the huge rivers and harbors bill, which is the pork-barrel deluxe. It is true of such lesser matters as Senator Douglas's proposal to abolish the old practice of maintaining, at the taxpayers' expense, a free barber shop for Senators. The number of Congressional voices which have been raised against waste are pitifully few, and can hardly be heard over the roaring "spend, spend, spend;
tax, tax, tax" chorus.

If there is any better way to destroy a country from within than to countenance waste, extravagance
and corruption in government, no one has thought of it. The people are being bled white by taxes now,
and the incentive to work, to save
and to achieve is being destroyed.
If we keep going on in the present direction there can be only end-
and that is national bankruptcy and national ruin. It happened to great empires of past times. It can happen here.

If you shoot at a sound the chances are just about even your shooting at a man and not at a deer.

RAINY WEATHER HAMPERST POTATO-APPLE HARVESTS

Aroostook county has harvested 85 percent of its potato crop and with favorable weather, this week will see the end of the 1951
harvest in the central area around Presque Isle.

A report Tuesday from the Maine
Department of Agriculture said
other Maine potato areas were running from 50 to 75 percent dug.

Northern Penobscot county reported 65 to 75 percent harvested
but at Patten a correspondent said,
"weather damp every day. Digging heavy. Many small acreages dug but larger acreages still have considerable to dig."

In the Dexter-Corinna section a reporter indicated the potato crop was about one-half in.

The Corinna area said its dry bean crop was about 50 percent combined. A condition report said crop quality was good but that yield appeared to be running slightly behind that of last year.

Maine's 1951 oat harvest is nearly completed, with Aroostook accreage 95 percent harvested and central Maine farms running about 90 percent.

Rainy weather, the Department said, has hampered the apple harvest, slowing down picking operations, in part because of poor traction of equipment.

Nevertheless McIntosh are about 90 percent harvested and the picking of Cortland and Macouns began last week.

Look at your license. That's a deer tag, not a man tag, Mr. Hunter.

PEARL and His Musical
Gems, veterans of a thousand and one one-night stands, are on the march through village and farm again, bringing sweet music and smooth ballads out where the tall corn grows. . . . Ray, who once did 53 one-nighters in a row before catching his breath, has been nicknamed "The One-Night King" and apply so. . . . Every fall after the resort season is over, the "Pearls of the Plains" jump into their musical safari of two limousines and a truck, and hit the highroad of song.

They play such places as "Smith's Barn" in Nebraska to the swank country club in Tulsa, Okla., before coming back to the big city, which this year was Chicago and the world-famous Aragon ballroom. . . . Ray has just recorded two new novelties of his records which are liable to sweep the country any week now. . . . The first is "Pass the Meat and Pass the Potatoes," which has been adopted as their theme song by the National Restaurant Association, and the second is "Find 'em, Fool 'em and Forget 'em," which is done in the Al Trace manner.

Both are sung by as winsome and lovely a vocalist as has hit the great plains in many a year. . . . The is Lois Costello, Joliet, Ill., a 25-year-old beauty who has been dubbed "The Dagmar of the Bandstand".

The walk is now entering its third surge of popularity since Pearl took to the bandstand 25 years ago in his native Johnstown, Pa. . . . His hit-parade line-up includes four walks in his ten-top request numbers. . . . "People come to a ballroom to dance," he says, "and they want to know what they're dancing to. My motto is an old, but good one: 'Where is the melody?' No bo-bop and off-beat for the Musical Gems". . . . And it pays off in the small towns where Ray is One-Night King.

OFF-THE-CUFF CHATTER
Poor Cary Grant. . . . The real reason he pulled out from his "Mr. Blandings" show, according to trade reports, is that old devil income tax. . . . Although his salary for the show was in the neighborhood of $3,000, income tax experts figured Cary wound up with a flat $70.

By LITTLE HULL
THIS WRITER has just returned from six weeks in Great Britain, France and Germany, and if anything could have soured him more than usual on the theory and practice of socialism, it is the extraordinary change in the mental attitude of the average Briton as he had known him.

It wasn't this writer who discovered the fallacies of state socialism. Five thousand years of history have demonstrated that it cannot function successfully. Progress is the result solely of the mental and physical efforts of man. Slow down their efforts and you slow down progress. The British Labor government was elected upon promises of easy days for the worker: of free wine and short working hours, and upon the ridiculous theory that "good old England" could still maintain her rank among other nations whose people worked hard in order to prosper in their youth and save something for their old age.

It didn't work! And if the Labor government is returned in the coming October election, England will sink well below even her present position. The men who manage the great economy of England today are not men, but their training is in labor relations—not management.

The English workingman took the "easy time" promises literally. But it has sapped his stamina and lowered his morale. He used to be proud of British products. Today he doesn't seem to care—and the results are everywhere apparent. He boasts of his fertility in "taking" the lower standard of living—and it is he who maintains it! Only ignorance, coupled with a sort of dislike for those who have succeeded, can account for the stupidity of one who will elect, for Labor's sake, for his country, such an inglorious destiny.

There are enough grand bastards to lead that grand old nation down the road to decay which it is now following. There will always be an England—the fervent prayer and hope of the whole free world—an England whose strong arm we can again depend upon.

MAINE FARMS UNDER-INSURED BY 40 PER CENT

The average Maine farm is "seriously under-insured," according to Caspar F. Cowan, president, Maine Association of Mutual Insurance Companies. He said a bad barn fire would put many Maine farmers "completely out of business."

"They would not collect enough insurance money," he explained, "to rebuild at today's high building costs."

Cowan also said there are still many farmers who do not have money enough saved to rebuild from their own funds.

Fire is a serious threat to farmers, Cowan said. Farm fire losses throughout the nation were more than $100,000,000 last year, and an estimated $500 persons lost their lives. Despite this he said many farmers are simply not "insurance minded."

"The average good barn," he pointed out, "will cost about $7,500 to build in Maine. Some of course, will cost considerably more. A $7,500 barn can be properly insured for about $50 a year. Other farm properties—residences, tool and machinery sheds, garages, etc.—can be protected at comparable cost. Yet most Maine farm properties are under-insured by at least 40 per cent."

Farm mutual insurance companies carry on extensive fire prevention programs. Fewer fire losses mean lower insurance costs, since savings developed by these programs are passed on by the companies to their policyholders.

Cowan said the answer to the danger of under-insurance is an immediate appraisal.

"Farmers should get an estimate of their property values from a competent source—their insurance representative, or the local banker or real estate man—and increase their insurance accordingly. In today's era of high prices, adequate insurance is of utmost importance."

ANTIHISTAMINES DEFENDED BY MEDICAL WRITER IN AMERICAN MAGAZINE

Albert Q. Malsel, widely known medical writer, urges the use of antihistamines in the October issue of The American Magazine.

In an article on treatment for the common cold, Malsel describes the experiments conducted by Dr. Marvin Ziporn of the U. S. Public Health Service at the Maritime Health Service at the Maritime Training School, Alameda, Calif.

Among a test group of patients with running noses, a loss of the senses of smell and taste, and facial pains—all of these the most common early symptoms of a cold—the antihistamines clearly outperformed the traditional APC treatment, Malsel reports.

The writer explains how his family will use the antihistamines: "On the firm basis of such evidence we're going to defy the medical thunderers and use antihistamines in the hope of killing off a large proportion of our ineffectual colds. We're going to use them carefully. We're going to stop their use if any of us gets side effects more troublesome than the central effects of a cold. We're not going to drive cars or run machinery after taking such pills."

In another place in The American Magazine article, the writer points out that sales of these pills have averaged $30,000,000 in 1949 and 1950 as compared with $14,500,000 in 1948. "An awful lot of people have kept on using these little white pellets, not because they stop all colds, but because they seem to do more—at the right time—than any doctor can offer to do for them by any other method of treatment," Malsel says.
